Holiday Train Shows Promote Railroad Hobby

Each year, the holiday season is also “train show season,” with many local railroad hobby shows taking place. Even in these days of video games and social media, there is something about a large model train display that captures the attention of children of all ages. Many people have nostalgic memories of a train set circling the Christmas tree, and event organizers offer show visitors the opportunity to relive the “good old days.” For serious railroad historians and collectors, the railroad hobby show is an excellent way to introduce railroad memorabilia to other enthusiasts, and connect with local collectors who might not make the trip to big railroadiana shows such as Gaithersburg.

The northeast must be filled with railfans, as an abundance of shows take place in this region. The New England Model Train Expo has been a regular event in Marlborough, MA for many years, as has been the Great Train Extravaganza show in Albany, NY. From Buffalo to Poughkeepsie, every major upstate New York city hosted a train show during the holiday season. The “First Frost” train meet took place in Allentown, PA, as it does each November, and the annual New Haven RR Technical & Historical Society convention included its usual public railroad show.

Railroad enthusiasts in the nation’s heartland were not left out, with shows in Oklahoma City, OK, New Braunfels, TX, and St. Cloud, MN. Golden Spike Enterprises’ Tampa Rail Fair gave railroadiana collectors and model railroaders in the Sunshine State the chance to do some last minute holiday shopping.

While railroad hobby shows aren’t usually the place to sell the “big ticket” items, they do offer vendors the chance to bring out more common memorabilia that is of interest to the casual collector. Most of the dealers at this season’s shows who checked in with Key, Lock & Lantern reported strong sales. And, some of the younger visitors who came to see the model train displays may become the railroadiana collectors of the future.

Many Key, Lock & Lantern members who sold railroadiana at the shows also distributed KL&L membership brochures, and the organization’s display made its usual appearance at the Great Train Extravaganza in Albany. Train shows are an excellent venue for introducing KL&L to potential members, simply by handing a flyer to anyone who makes a purchase or expresses an interest in railroadiana. Current membership brochures (in PDF format) are available for printing on the Key, Lock & Lantern website.

Introduce Railroadiana Collecting at Model Train Shows & Events

As noted in the cover story in this issue, many model train and railroad hobby shows are held during the holiday season. While most of us make plans to attend local hobby shows in our area, they aren't always large "money makers" for selling higher end railroad memorabilia, compared with the big railroadiana-only events such as Gaithersburg. However, they do provide us with the opportunity to introduce the collecting aspect of the hobby to other railroad enthusiasts.

As usual this year, I set up several tables of railroadiana for sale, and the Key, Lock & Lantern display, at the Great Train Extravaganza in Albany, NY. I didn't take in too much money at this year's show (although several other KL&L members reported doing very well), but the main purpose of having a table was to spark some interest in railroadiana among the many non-collector railfans who attend. The show was a success, with several lanterns going home to first time buyers, and plenty of KL&L brochures distributed.

While I may sound like a radio hotbox detector, repeatedly announcing the same message, we need to get out there and promote Key, Lock & Lantern, and the historical preservation aspect of the hobby in general. Model train clubs & NRHS chapter meetings, local historical society programs, train shows, and community festivals all provide the opportunity to bring new participants into the collecting hobby.

Key, Lock & Lantern brochures are available for download in PDF format on the main page of the KL&L website. They can easily be printed and copied for distribution at events, train shows, or in online auction packages. I would like to ask every member to take a moment to download the brochure, and make a few copies to hand out. The continued growth of our organization depends on your help.

Best wishes for the new year, and good luck in the ongoing hunt for railroadiana!

Online Bidding Helps Boost Prices at Brookline Auction

With highly detailed and generously illustrated online catalogs, the semi-annual railroading auctions held at the Brookline (NH) Auction Gallery have always attracted a fair amount of absentee bids. However, many collectors find that there is an advantage to attending an auction in person, either to adjust bid amounts based on the funds remaining in a budget, or simply to have the ability to judge the pace of competing bids. Leaving an absentee bid just isn't the same as being there, but it is a reasonable alternative for those who can't make the trip in person.

In recent years, though, the expansion of high speed internet service has allowed many auction houses to offer the best of both worlds. Live online auction services now give internet users the ability to follow advances in price as they

While attendance at the auction gallery for the October 12th sale was still strong, many bidders took advantage of the new online option. And although bids from the floor still took home many lots, internet bids seemed to drive up the hammer price on most items. Union Pacific Steam Locomotive Begins Journey From California To Wyoming

Big Boy No. 4014 Makes First Move in More Than Two Decades

Union Pacific Railroad announced on November 14, 2013 that Big Boy locomotive No. 4014 has commenced the second phase of its journey to Union Pacific's Heritage Fleet Operations headquarters in Cheyenne, WY, from Fairplex, home of the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds in Pomona, California. The 1,260-mile trek began with the No. 4014 moving across the Fairgrounds parking lot on temporary track installed specifically for the move, to Union Pacific's Colton, California rail yard. It marks No. 4014's first move in more than two decades from its home at the RailGiants Train Museum.

"Union Pacific long has played a key role in building America, starting when Abraham Lincoln signed the railroad into existence more than 150 years ago," said Ed Dickens, senior manager of Union Pacific Heritage Operations. "Restoring No. 4014 is a great way for us to honor employees past and present while bringing to life Union Pacific's history for railfans everywhere." Final travel preparations will be made in Colton, after which No. 4014 will be moved to Cheyenne. The restoration process is expected to take several years and will involve thousands of hours of work by a team of steam locomotive experts.

Following a 20-year operating career, the Union Pacific delivered No. 4014 to the RailGiants museum in January of 1962. The locomotive was one of 25 Big Boys built for Union Pacific and was used primarily for freight service on the transcontinental railroad route. The locomotive and tender weigh more than 1.2 million pounds and were delivered to Union Pacific in 1941. The travel schedule for No. 4014 will be published in the coming weeks at www.upsteam.com. News & photo courtesy of Union Pacific.

Union Pacific Railroad Big Boy locomotive No. 4014 begins its journey from the RailGiants Train Museum in Pomona, California, enroute to UP Colton Yard and eventually to Cheyenne, Wyoming for restoration as part of UP's Heritage Fleet.

As Always, Gaithersburg Show is Worth the Trip

Railroadiana collectors who made the annual trip to the main event in Gaithersburg, MD this year were not disappointed, as Golden Spike Enterprises organized yet another excellent show. Gaithersburg has a reputation for bringing out the “top shelf” memorabilia, and there was plenty to choose from at this year’s show.

Dealers and collectors from around the country converge on the Montgomery County Fairgrounds over the first weekend in November each year, for what is rightly advertised as the nation’s premier railroad memorabilia show. From dining car china to timetables, there is something for every collector at the Gaithersburg show.

In addition to the higher end artifacts, there were plenty of bargains to be found at this year’s show, along with many reasonably priced items. A collector could go home with a handful of purchases for a few dollars, or could easily have spent many thousands. For the last several years, a model train show has been held in conjunction with the railroadiana show, introducing new participants to the collecting hobby.

As always, the Gaithersburg railroadiana show was well worth the trip, and those who attended are already looking forward to next year. Photos continued on Page 8.

From lanterns, locks, and hardware to books, timetables and advertising, there was something of interest to every collector of railroadiana. Photo by Dave Hamilton.

Lanterns For Sale

A collection of 40 lanterns: 14 railroad, 22 industrial & general purpose, & 4 marine, some dating back to the 19th Century, is being sold by the owner, who has been collecting since 1939. 37 are oil burners, 3 are electric; 4 brass, 1 of brass/copper. Some spare globes & parts. Call 910-392-9595 or e-mail robertewinkler@bellsouth.net for list & photos.

Holiday Train Shows

Even for those railroading collectors who do not set up sales tables, attending a holiday train show is an enjoyable way to visit with fellow railfans and hunt for a bargain. There is sometimes a hidden gem buried among the model trains, and railroad memorabilia dealers often offer new stock at hobby shows, providing a preview before the big railroading events. Attendees at this year's shows found some interesting railroad artifacts at reasonable prices.

Additional train shows are scheduled throughout the winter season, for those who are experiencing "cabin fever" in the colder climates, and for railfans who need a break from the typical routine in the south. Many events serve as fundraisers for railroad clubs and historical societies, so they support railroad preservation projects, as well. Be sure to check out the railroad event calendar in the KL&L News, and online at www.klnl.org, for listings of train shows and related events. Participation in a train show is an excellent way to promote the railroading collecting aspect of the hobby, and is always an enjoyable way to spend an afternoon. See you at the show!

Plans Underway for Key, Lock & Lantern Convention

Key, Lock & Lantern members who are accustomed to receiving a KL&L convention registration form in the mail around this time of the year may be wondering where it is. Don't blame the mail carrier, though; forms have not yet been sent out, as the convention committee is still making final arrangements for the 2014 meeting & show.

The Albany/Glenmont Comfort Inn, which has hosted the convention since Forbes Hauptman first organized a railroad swap meet there in 1971, is currently undergoing a remodeling project. As a result, the banquet rooms are not available for our usual schedule. The convention committee is considering alternate dates and/or a new location. Once final plans have been made, information will be posted on the Key, Lock & Lantern website, in the KL&L News, and registration forms will be mailed to current members.

As always, the convention schedule will include "members only" trading sessions, a railroadians exhibit and swap meet open to all collectors, and railroad history programs. Photos of past conventions are available at www.klnl.org.

Nominations for KL&L Officers & Board of Trustees Sought

In accordance with the Key, Lock & Lantern bylaws, any nominations for the organization's officer positions must be made in writing, 30 days prior to the annual meeting, and nominations for the board of trustees must be made 60 days in advance. Any member in good standing who is interested in any of these positions is requested to submit an e-mail to KL&L president Dave Hamilton at transportsim@aol.com.

FOR SALE: ANTIQUE RAILROAD PASSENGER CAR INTERIOR HARDWARE

Ideal for a Museum or Historical Society Restoration Project

Mostly brass (some Victorian - Eastlake?) original antique hardware pieces, salvaged from a scrapped railroad passenger car. Items include sash locks, sash lifts, sash lock stops; door lock parts, handles, pr. hinges, and knobs. Two pieces have "B&O" cast on them. Over 100 pieces in all. Condition varies from broken/missing parts, bent, to useable, and some nicer pieces. Some have the Adams & Westlake Co. hallmark. Also available separately is a Northern Electric wooden dovetailed RR telephone ringer box.

Call Phil Simms, Campbell Hall, N.Y. at (845) 427-5051 for more information.

An Adams & Westlake lantern marked for the Delaware & Hudson Railway, with a red fancy script logo globe, sold for $400. A high bid of $190 took home an unusual Williams Color Test Lamp for testing color blindness, made by Peter Gray of Boston. A nice adlake switch lamp marked with the Pennsylvania RR keystone logo sold for $170.

Station signs can vary in price, but all it takes is two bidders with an interest in a location to get things rolling. There were obviously some Maine Central collectors at the auction, with North Anson bringing $625 and $725 for Burnham Jct.

There was a time when a porcelain Western Union Telegraph & Cable Office sign was a common sight in almost every depot. This nice example sold for $160

A Pennsylvania Railroad gate sign that includes trains to Washington, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, and the Northern Express to Erie and Buffalo brought a high bid of $400

A nice green cut fixed globe lantern from the Northern Railroad of New Hampshire sold for $2100.

A Grand Trunk Pacific Railway brass heart lock with a Grand Trunk Railway key sold for a high bid of $210.

A high bid of $275 was needed to acquire this nicely marked Grand Trunk Railway brass switch lock.

A high bid of $100 took home this round bottom New Haven Railroad parlor car drinking glass.

An interesting porcelain sign from the Hudson & Manhattan RR went to a new home for a reasonable $65.

One of several station signs in the auction, this one from Severances on the Boston & Maine Railroad sold for $400.

Norfolk Southern Supports Restoration of Historic Locomotive Through Sale of Rothko Painting

In a fortunate intersection of the worlds of fine art and railroading, Norfolk Southern has sold a well-known abstract expressionist painting and will use a portion of the proceeds to help fund the restoration and long-term maintenance of another American treasure, the Class J No. 611 steam passenger locomotive.

NS Chairman and CEO Wick Moorman said NS sold its untitled 1959 Mark Rothko painting through an auction in New York City on November 14 and will direct $1.5 million of the proceeds to “Fire Up 611!,” the capital campaign to rehab the famous Norfolk & Western Railway streamliner and return it to passenger excursion service.

“No. 611 is an American classic, a reflection of a time and a people who put the country on their backs and carried it into to the modern age of railroading,” Moorman said. “611 is not an NS, N&W, Virginia, or Roanoke locomotive. It belongs to everyone and every generation. In that spirit, and on behalf of NS employees everywhere, I announce our strong support for bringing back a true national marvel.”

“People from 15 countries have contributed their time and resources to bring back the ‘Queen of Steam,’” said Bev Fitzpatrick, executive director of 611’s owner, the Virginia Museum of Transportation (VMT) in Roanoke, Va. “NS’ generous and timely support gives us the best opportunity to reach the $5 million needed to put this icon back on the rails and keep her moving for decades.”

Number 611 rolled out of N&W’s Roanoke shops in 1950 and with sister Class A and Y6 locomotives constituted the “Magnificent Three” that pulled passenger and heavy freight trains during the last two decades of steam railroading in the United States. Class J locomotives such as 611 could pull 15 cars at 110 mph, and their builders once promoted the advanced engineering by showing how several men, with nothing more than a rope, could pull one on the track. 611 was retired in 1959, restored for excursion service in 1984, and retired again in 1994. Since then, 611 has been on display at VMT.

The 611 plan contemplates making it available for service in NS’ 21st Century Steam program in 2014. In this program, several vintage steam locomotives from NS’ past give people throughout the railroad system opportunities to ride behind the marvelous, powerful locomotives of old, while learning how today’s railroads create jobs, support the economy, save fuel, protect the environment, and keep America competitive.

“With railroads as the backbone of the country’s transportation system – today as during 611’s time – we all can look forward to the brightest days of America’s future,” said NS President Jim Squires. “611 represents not just past glory but infinite possibilities for the future.”

Rothko (1903-1970) was a Latvian émigré who became one of the most famous post-World War II artists in the United States. He resisted having his works labeled, but art critics said he wanted people to have spiritual experiences when viewing them.

NS’ signed Rothko painting was created in 1959. The “oil on paper laid down on canvas” image measures 29-1/2 by 21-1/2 inches and features amorphous forms that float on top of each other, “...wonderfully capable of moving the viewer to extreme states of feeling...” according to Sotheby’s, the auction house.

NS bought the painting in 1996. It was part of the railroad’s collection of public area visual art and historical artifacts safeguarded throughout the history of the corporation, including train models, tools, clocks, safety and service awards, and maps. Some pieces – including the Rothko -- have been loaned to museums in the U.S. and abroad for exhibitions. News Courtesy of Norfolk Southern.
